Berger changed the balls for a smaller set, with which he executed those shots which the papers all over the country described, but which we never fully believed possible until now. It seemed as if M. Berger had his cue-ball divided accurately in his eye into countless partitions, and that he knew in just what serpentine course a stroke on any one of them would force it. He would force his ball around or over into a would lote a his bail around or over into a basket placed on the table, and make the inevitable carom, to the 'satisfaction me, professor.' He would jump it through a hoop held a foot above the table, over a cue, or send it spinning

e were convinced, by what we saw last night, that the best players of this country may give up all idea, for the present, of their stand-ing even in a fixed ratio of inferiority to M. Berger. The difference is not in degree, but in kind. It was seen in New York that the Professor would beat the person he played with about the same number of points, whether it was Phelan or some amateur. Kavanagh, we believe, played a closer game with him than any one else. Mr. Secreiter, a few days since, made over seventy in a game with him. But we count this nothing, for we believe that Mr. Berger, in the way of large runs, has done in this country by no means what he can do. He evidently did not exert himself for this last night, in the regular game. He tried to make a carom each time, probably, but when he got the balls together he did not nurse them, but would effect almost every shot by a perpendicular force. Their apparent approximation to him, therefore, we think no test of the comparative merits of our players. Mr. Kavanagh, an anadarstand, is practicing sedulously in M. we understand, is practicing sedulously in M. Berger's style of game, and has acquired a great many of his shots, but we think it will be a long time before he equals his master." "Mr. Punch is a great authority," said Dr.

A remarkable case of very "early piety" has just been found in Brussels. The police making their rounds at midnight, found an or dinary clothes line hanging near a door, sever-al feet above the ground, and tracing its histo-ry discovered that it came out of a garret-window above. They entered the house, convinced that they were on the track of some daring that they were on the track of some daring burglars, searched all the premises, and at last on walking into the garret were horrified to find themselves confronted by a house maid, in a very easy evening dress, who, with tears, ex-plained that the mysterious clothes-line was at-tached to her left arm, in order that a young waiter to whom above the present attached waiter to whom she was hereself attached, coming early in the morning might call her with a jerk to prayers at the Cathedral. As this explained the clothes-line, and there was not much in the line of clothes before them, the discomfitted and blushing police beat a heatt retreat. hasty retreat.

HUMORS OF THE SCHOOL ROOM .- A teacher in exercising his pupils recently in arithmetic, gave the following question: "A farmer put 132 bushels 1 peck of apples in 46 barrels; how many bushels did he put into a barrel!" A lad of bright parts, ambitious to be the first to give an answer, said :

"Fourteen bushels 3 pecks."
"But how could you get 14 bushels of apples into a barrel?" saked the teacher.

"Oh! I suppose the apples were small ones,"

A lady, passing in her carriage, witnessed his courage, and the next day he received a gold watch bearing the cypher of the donor, and it was that of the Empress.

NATIONAL REPUBLICAN. JOHNSON AND BLONDIN.

[Extracted, by Punch, from the latest edition of Boswell's Life of Dr. Johnson.] The next day was Saturday, and I called upon my reverend friend in the Temple, and after some hesitation I mentioned that I had purchase tickets of admission to the Crystal Palace to see the feats of the French acrobat, Blondin, who was to exhibit that day. I said that I did not know whether I should go or not. "Sir," said Dr. Johnson, "why do you tell me a lie? You know that you have resolved upon witnessing this Frenchman's exhibition, and the weakness of the desire is less culpable than the cowardice of the mendacity that would veil it."

I admitted that I had the curiosity to behold an instance of the power of courage and skill in surmounting difficulties of a grave nature.

"You are a humbug," said my venerated friend. "You care nothing for the fellow's courage or skill, but you have a vulgar desire to go with the multitude, and, perhaps, a con cealed hope that you may be present at a pain ful catastrophe." I urged that the Prince of Wales, my Sover eign's eldest soo, had witnessed the sight, and rewarded the performer with a medal. My honored friend became exceedingly angry

"Do not," he said, "drag the name of a mem-ber of the royal family of these realms (royal de facto he added with a murmur to himself) into your miserable plea. The Prince of Wales, in not refusing to join in a transatlantic holiday, was gracefully discharging an instalment of the duty for which he was accredited to the West. You have no business on Sydenham-hill, and if you had a medal, so far from bestowing it upon Blondin, you would stick it upon your own hat, and repeat the Paoli farce. Let But my character, as is well known, is one of invincible fortitude and pertinacity, and when I know myself to be in the right, I am not easily put down. I therefore returned to the charge with a courage which almost astonished my-

"Pindar sang the praises of horse-racing, Dr. Johnson," I replied.

"A horse is not a Franchman, nor are you Pindar," retorted my reverend friend, with that quickness which belonged to him. The lively sally restored his good humor, for, he added, "You are not even a Pindar of Wakefield, though in your heart you despise Goldy's Vicar

I did not think so highly of Goldsmith's little tale as some did, I was far from despising an elegantly written and moral fable. I then said, "Dr. Johnson, will you do me the favor to come and see Blondin?" come and see Blondin?"

He laughed, and said I was putting him to the experimentum crucis—which I afterwards thought a most felicitous phrase, because the Frenchman had to "cross" the transept. I doubt not I have lost hundreds of equally good blines through my culpable negligence of transport.

This was unjust, and I told him that though things through my culpable negligence of scription.

"Why, sir," he said, "if you had asked me to purchase a ticket for this eight I should have peremptorily refused, because I am not justified in contributing to bribe a fellow-creature though only a Frenchman and a mountebank, to risk the loss of his life. But as you have paid for you."

"We are at the Crystal Palace," I remarked, ns the train entered the station:

"The building is not of crystal, nor is it a palace," said my illustrious friend.

The name, I said humbly, was given by Mr.

"Mr. Punch," he continued, "is most fortunate in selecting denominations. It was he who gave the name of Arcadia to that new arcaded garden and locality at South Kensington a name which I observe the journals are adopting without acknowledgement of the orig-inal inventor. But few can so well afford to be robbed, though the wealth of the Bank of England is no excuse for the criminality of the bur glar. We proceed across the beautiful garden, and my reverend friend, whose classic recollections ere ever ready, pointed to the Mercury on one of the water temples, and remarked that there was a Blondin ready perched. I said, "Stat in atternum," but was immediately and atternly rebuked by my houored friend for light use of a word signifying eternity. "But," he added playfully, "do not be cast down, for you yourself are an everlasting donkey." This reassured was used we ascended to the valley and took me, and we ascended to the gallery and took our seats. Gazing down upon the vast area, on the sides of which and around it, were

"What are you blubbering for?" said my illustrious friend. "Do you envy that poor acrobat in his triumph, or do you imagine that you yourself could perform those feats better?

In the first alternative the sentiment is unworthy; the second, the vanity is egregious. Thus did he ever seek to improve my mind and heart, and what do I not owe to him? I told him, however, that he misjudged me, and that I was weeping to think that 10,000 of my fellow-creatures had assembled to derive extement from the chauce of a French mountebank breaking his neck.

"Spare your tears and stow your twaddle," responded my venerable friend. "They have come for no such savage purpose. They have heard that a person has acquired the art of safely walking on a suspended cord, and they evince a laudable desire to witness a triumph

He telegraphed to a friend in Memphis for a solution of his doubt, and was rather surprised at receiving the gruff answer, "Damn you! come on!" He obeyed the discorteous invitation; reached Memphis; and soon found his hotel surrounded by a mob of demons, yelling for his blood, though they only knew of him that he came from the North, and was supposed to be after pay for his property. Aided by a friend, he made his escape from a rear window, ran several miles across the country to the next station north on the railroad, there took the cars, and somehow reached Cincinnati, whence he telegraphed home that he would follow the forthwith, and wished to meet his friends and neighbors the next evening. He did so meet them, and told them he was in for the war for the Union, and raised a company of
